Are you ashamed because of the greatness
of the Passion which you inflicted on me?
Do not be afraid.
The cross is not mine;
it is the sting of death.
These nails do not pierce me with pain;
they pierce me more deeply with love of you.
These wounds do not draw groans from me;
rather they draw you into my heart.
The stretching-out of my body
makes room for you in my heart;
it does not increase my pain.
My blood is not lost to me;
it is paid in advance for your ransom.
Come, then, come back to me;
for see, I return good for evil,
love for injuries,
and for deep wounds a deeper love.

(St Peter Chrysologus, c.380-450 A.D.)
